

14. Even in a case of assaulting the employee, the domestic enquiry should be conducted as held by the Hon'ble High Court in the second citation mentioned above. In this case, the respondent's allegation against the petitioner is that they had discontinued out of their own volition and disinterest in employment that too, was not properly proved as discussed above. Further it is not the case of the respondent that the petitioners were regular in indulging misconduct with the employees. There is no past history of the workman to show that the petitioners involved in any misconduct or indiscipline by violating the principles of labour enactments. An employee who has completed 240 days service is treated as workmen under 2(s) of Industrial Disputes Act and hence he cannot be denied the employment without any reason. In this case as admitted by the respondent, the petitioners No.1 and 2 were permanent employees, who were working for more than seven years and two years respectively and hence the respondent cannot terminate the petitioners without any domestic enquiry. Hence, I feel that the act of the respondent company was a clear case of violation of labour laws and acted against the spirit of welfare of the workmen of the company and hence it is against the provision of labour enactments and natural justice. Accordingly, this point is answered.

15. The contention of the petitioner is that he was terminated from service without any reason or enquiry and hence the action of the first respondent is illegal, arbitrary and unsustainable in law.

16. There is no record produced on the side of the first respondent or second respondent to prove that the enquiry was conducted before terminating him from service. Further no termination order was issued to the petitioner. In the above circumstances, the termination of the petitioner by the first respondent is illegal. Hence for the reasons stated above, this court has come to the conclusion that the petitioner was an employee under the first respondent and the termination of the petitioner from the service is against the law. Considering the facts and circumstances, the petitioners are not entitled for back wages. Accordingly, this point is answered.

17. In the result, this industrial dispute is partly allowed and the petitioners No.1 and 2 are entitled for reinstatement with continuity of service from 8-4-2006 and 27-10-2009 respectively and other benefits. However, they are not entitled for back wages. No costs.

II Additional District Judge,
Presiding Officer, Labour Court,
